Their first tune was a stumpy, fast and brilliant, too fast for some of the dancers. Diamond and his partner stayed in, and people cheered and clapped them when they finished the dance, sweating and panting. "Beer!" Diamond cried, and was carried off in a swirl of young men and women, all laughing and chattering. The voices of the mages talking were like the voices of the stream running. The stream said its. quickly had left little time for provisioning the ships. They overran the towns along the west. The roof of the cavern was far above him. The trickle of water dripping from the mica ledge. Nothing happened as he said the words Ard had taught him, his old witch-teacher with her bitter. His old master was sitting in the grass near the pond, eating an apple. Bits of eggshell flecked the ground near his legs, which were caked with drying mud. When he looked up and saw Ogion's sending he smiled a wide, sweet smile. But he looked old. He had never looked so old. Ogion had not seen him for over a year, having been busy; he was always busy in Gont Port, doing the business of the lords and people, never a chance to walk in the forests on the mountainside or to come sit with Heleth in the little house at Re Albi and listen and be still. Heleth was an old man, near eighty now; and he was frightened. He smiled with joy to see Ogion, but he was frightened. "I know where it is," Anieb said. In the years since I began to write about Earthsea I've changed, of course, and so have the people. "They good for something else?" Crow, staring up at the words visible here and there between the rushes in the eaves, began to tremble with rage. Tern hurried him back to the boat before he exploded. the water and the tracks of a man's two feet going away from it. Golden did not praise the boy, not wanting to making him self-conscious or vain about what might be a passing, childish gift, like his sweet treble voice. There was too much fuss already made over that. Veil came from Thwil Town that morning, bringing them a basket of bread, cheese, milk curds, summer fruits. "What have you learned?" she asked Medra in her cool, gentle way, and he answered, "That I'm a fool." "You could go to Roke," he said, his eyes bright with excitement, mischief, daring. Meeting her. The tune ended. "Darkrose," he said, behind her in the dark. She turned her head and looked at. away from her in the running of the water, and she floated in delight in the caress of the stream. "Mars?". His mother tried to explain. "It's as if you'd found some great jewel," she said, "and what's one. The willows had grown, these two years. There was only a little space to sit among the green. Another pause. Golden glanced over at his wife, who stood by the window listening in silence. Then he looked at his son. Slowly the mixture of anger, disappointment, confusion, and respect on his face gave way to something simpler, a look of complicity, very nearly a wink. "I see," he said. "And what did you decide you want?". Silence before. There was a very long pause. They were not far inside the Grove, and still beside the stream, when Irian stopped, turned aside, and crouched down by the enormous, hunching roots of a willow that leaned out over the water. The four mages stood on the path. the ground near his legs, which were caked with drying mud. When he looked up and saw
